Information Policy Committee Annual Report: 2011-2012
By Shawna Kristin & Heather Morrison

The British Columbia Library Association’s Information Policy Committee undertakes to:
• Monitor developments in information access and advise BCLA and the general library community on appropriate policies and actions
• Organize conferences, public talks, newsletter articles, salons, brochures, etc.
• Develop public education and lobby campaigns
• Establish liaisons and coalitions with other organizations to further the position of BCLA in ensuring the public good is paramount in information policy development.

This past year, the IPC hosted a number of events, drafted a submission for the Open Government Consultation on behalf of BCLA, and stepped up communication and educational efforts through the BCLA Browser column, a new Twitter account and revamped blog.

Advocacy
The IPC drafted and submitted several documents on behalf of BCLA, including:
• Submission for the Open Government Consultation on behalf of BCLA.
• Resolution on Access Copyright and Academic Libraries for consideration at the 2012 AGM.
• Resolution on supporting Library and Archives Canada for consideration at the 2012 AGM.

Events
Lawful Access Salon
Lawful Access (a.k.a. the Online Spying Bill) refers to legislation requiring Internet Service Providers (arguably including libraries) to retain personal information on subscribers to hand over to authorities without a warrant. Previous attempts to pass this type of legislation have failed in Canada, however Bill C-30, currently on hold, could be brought back at any time. On October 14, 2011 IPC hosted a Salon featuring Vince Gogolek, Executive Director of the BC Freedom of Information and Privacy Association (FIPA). A summary of Vince’s talk in the BCLA Browser can be found in the IPC column at http://bclabrowser.ca/index.php/browser/issue/view/17

Out of the shadows: The Access Copyright Tariff and the Copyright Modernization Act
The Access Copyright Tariff has created a division in the academic sector. Some institutions continue to operate under the Tariff while others have opted out. At the same time, the Copyright Modernization Act in draft contains some elements that are useful to libraries such as including educational use in fair dealing, with some elements of concern, particularly language protecting digital locks that in effect removes many of the positive effects of the bill, making it illegal to pick a digital lock even for legal uses. On November 2, 2011, IPC and the Copyright Committee jointly sponsored a free session on these timely topics. Speakers were Paul Jones (Canadian Association of University Teachers), Meera Nair (Independent Scholar), and Dan Burnett (media lawyer).

Media Democracy Day
BCLA sponsored the fall 2011 Media Democracy Day in Vancouver featuring a number of speakers including academics, media experts and politicians. BCLA’s sponsorship provided an opportunity to ask a library-related question.

2012 Government and Legal Information Gathering
On May 4th, 2012 IPC co-sponsored with Simon Fraser University Library the Annual Government and Legal Information Gathering, a free event. James Turk, Executive Director, CAUT, spoke on advocacy in light of what is happening to libraries and librarians in government, universities and communities from an organizational-political perspective. Jennifer Marles, Oyen Wiggs Green & Mutala LLP, spoke to issues around Crown copyright and provided a general overview of Parliamentary privilege, its origins and distinctions from copyright law. Gay Lepkey, Manager, Public Works and Government Services Canada, Publishing and Depository Services provided an overview on DSP initiatives. Diane Thompson, Library Manager, Natural Resources Canada Library, talked about preserving science records as well as e-book service delivery from a governmental library context.
